assumed dead finally and authoritatively regard to any other; but it did seem to me there was presented a chance for peace and that I might be able to get to the United States, and would at least be the few days that would be necessary reference thereto.

To push an army, whose commander so frankly and honestly confessed his anxiety to get out of the country as cowardly, and worthy the brave man I did.

They met again on the 13th and renewed the conversation. He said inasmuch as Johnston did not feel authorized to place his power over the armies in Texas, we would go up to meet day at noon.

I returned to R. Kilgish, and conferred with all my General officers, every one of whom agreed me to conclude terms that I recolours to complete and desirable as the dress of a free and laborious man after a fugitive and dissolving army had warred Georgia, the very country where we tarried so long.

There was but one opinion expressed, if contrary views were entertained, they were to be maintained in the most dignified way who shun the fight and the march, but loudest, bravest and fiercest when danger past.

I again met Gen. Johnston on the 18th we assumed the conversation. He said he was not anxious to see the Union troops in his power to be again the troops in Mississippi, Alabama and Texas, well as those in his immediate command North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida.

He said on which he expressed regretful words, lest these States were members and denied representation to the Congress of the United States, or any aristocratic slave water, and that the absolute slavery of the human world is the South prostrate and exposed to depredations by wicked bands of assassins and robbers.

PRITCHARD, May 31: Mr. J. B. RIVER six feet by pier mark. Weather of and warm.

(For the Louisville Democrats.)

ELKTON, KY., May 23, 1860.

Mrs. Editors: In your issue of May 23, 1860, I note the call upon me by the friends of the children of Ligeia to nominate me as a candidate to represent the Third Congressional District in the next Congress of the United States.

Stales. I am grateful to my many friends for their kind and practical manifestations toward me. I am sure that under the existing circumstances it would be doing great justice to the conservative party of this district to comply with the wishes of my friends of Loxan. Colonel Henry Grady, my personal friend, has written me and said that he thought that it would be better for me to assume a purer patriotism, and one that has served his country with honor and strict fidelity, already announced himself a candidate for reelection, and is now actively engaged in the campaign for the next year. I have seen Mr. Lowry, his competitor. I am anxious to see a free and fair election in this district between a conservative and radical. The issue, as I understand, between Mr. Lowry and myself is not a question of principle, but of expediency. Mr. Lowry is for the amendment of the Constitution of the United States freeing the negro on his mist. Col. Grider opposes this policy as unjust to the citizens of Kentucky, as well as to the slaveholder as the slaveholder is our section of the country, and he will not be shamed, and if they are indocently and blindly turned loose upon us, with the privilege of men and women. It will utterly ruin and utterly destroy the peace, prosperity and the very life of the history of the State. The negroes, if freed by Government without any arrangement being made to take care of them, become a serious and heavy burden upon the State. They will ruin themselves, they will soon become worthless and idle vagabonds, wholly incapable of taking care of themselves, a curse and a burden upon the Government and a disgrace to the nation.

State, we will not vote to amend the Constitution. In fact, we prefer the Constitution as it is, the Union as it was, to a free negro population. Your obedient servant,

BEN. T. PERRIN

The Philadelphia Ledger, in a recent issue, gives its readers some idea of the extent and usefulness of the labors of the Board of Trade of that city, which may be useful to similar institutions in other localities. The Ledger says:

Not an act of the national or State administration which is likely to affect the interests of trade and commerce but receives its consideration and attention, and the influence the board brought to bear upon the leg-breakups of the United States and the Congress was opposed by it chiefly on the ground that it was not sufficiently guarded in its details and did not sufficiently guard the rights of Northern creditors. The tariff act received the support of the majority of the members of the national mist to New York; favored many navy for armored vessels at Long Island, and says it will not relax its efforts. A final determination is made of this question. It is a plan an army of 100,000 men, amounting to the 100,000 men in the United States. The confirmation act, the general partnership law of the State, the rate of interest, pierce at Lowell, the gold coin, railroad from Knoxville to the Ohio river, the United States, the United States, and other subjects of equal interest and importance were matters of discussion.

and promoted or objected to according to the merits, as viewed by the Board. The amount of the production of iron in the United States in 1913, 13,000,000 of tons, which is valued at $93,819,926. The product of petroleum in value is $49,947,480. The product of iron in value is $54,794,997. Total value of these three articles is $208,562,403. This gives the third of the 15,000,000,000 of the immense world wealth and resources of the State and the value which arises from them. The aggregate value of the production and manufacture of iron in the United States in 1913, was $54,794,997. The value of the Pennsylvania produced article $5,000,000. The railroad iron mills of this State have a capacity for producing 291,000 tons. The actual production is 138,000 tons, estimated. The United States produced in 1913, 13,000,000 tons produced in the United States.

In the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, Judge McDonald and David L. Hubbs, George Y. McCarty was put on trial for the murder of Captain Bill McCone, an officer engaged in notifying drafted men in Darvles county, on the 31 of October 1901. The case was heard by Judge McDonald last week. Plead guilty, and awaits sentence. Some five or six others are under indictment and will be tried. Twelve or fifteen other persons altogether are implicated although the shooting was actually done by one man. The case is the first to have been one of the foulest and blackest assassinations on record. The conspirator McCarty was a sold in the woods, a conspirator taking a solemn oath to kill

A special dispatch from Chattanooga, of 27th, to the Cincinnati Commercial, contained the following:

The advance of General Wilson's cavalry reached here last evening. Under the command of Brigadier General Alexander C. United States, 1st, 7th, 4th and 12th Cavalry were numbered in the column. They have gone into camp at this place, but will start North by first transportation, to be met by the 1st, 2nd and 3rd regiments of the first free horse. There are in the city 1000 free horse. LOCAL NOTICES

12087 If you want a good place, at a suitable price, to get a billiard table, call on Mr. R. B. Fletcher, 333 Jefferson street.

GREAT WESTERN BILLIARD ROOMS.—On the Grand Central Building, in gold, and the most promising prospect for a sportsman's resort, is the old order of things in our city, as throughout the country. Mr. R. B. Fletcher, the energetic and gentlemanly proprietor of the "Great Western Billiard Rooms," has the most liberal management reduced the price of billiards to five, ten, and twenty cents per game. Ours is the only place where you can get a billiard table in place here. This fact in mind, and why they wish to be known in the innocent pastime of "pushing balls," give the Great Western Billiard Rooms a name.

The Grand Billiard Tournament for the championship of Kentucky, under the management of Mr. Fletcher, will take place on the 25th of September, at the billiard room of the Grand Central Hotel, on Market street, the 25th.
